CIA Power
Sir: The recent revelations of CIA financing of the National Student Association point the way to long overdue congressional control of this powerful governmental agency. Although nominally guided by legislative committees, it is evident that the CIA is enjoying an undesirable degree of autonomy in both its domestic and foreign operations. If democracy is to be preserved, we cannot remain apathetic to the invasion of a representative body of the academic-intellectual stratum of society by peddlers of influence. The university, long considered a bastion of free inquiry, will soon lose its credibility of scholarship if such reproachable subsidies and the attendant controls are permitted. Clandestine payments by an intelligence organization operating without the informed consent of the electorate represent the antithesis of a free society. Marshall C. Goldberg.
